COUNTY SUPERVISOR

"Get busy living or get busy dying." – Andy Dufresne, The Shawshank Redemption

Lisa and I were able to escape down to Zihuatenejo, Mexico for the New Year's holiday. Since that is the location referenced in the ending of the film, I thought it appropriate to include it in this month's summary. It is a solid metaphor for life, but also the job of a Supervisor. This role requires that one remain diligent and active in the pursuit of progress and continuous improvement to move the ball downfield.

I hope you enjoyed the year in review last month – I know it was eye opening for us to look back on everything that we have done and those things we continue to push to affect positive change. This year has started off so very differently than last year. Obviously, I have a little bit of experience under my belt, but I have also sharpened my juggling skills in order to undertake new policy priorities before we even have closure on the ones already undertaken.

Last month, I joined some of my Delta Counties Coalition colleagues on a trip to Southern California to tour projects they are pursuing to build more resiliency in their water supply. It was time well spent to learn and see firsthand their challenges and constraints in providing affordable water to their customers. We are building relationships there that will hopefully come in handy in convincing them to help us invest in the Delta, rather than just circumventing water from it. While there, I was able to address their subcommittee on long-term planning and make an impassioned plea for working together to meet all our needs.

We've been out and about at various crab feeds and fundraisers, so if we haven't seen you, we will look for you at one coming up. This month will bring many Lunar New Year celebrations, so here's hoping for great things from the Year of the Dragon!

We love feedback in this office, so let us know if you need some help or like something in particular that we've done. As always, share this newsletter with your

Sloughhouse Solar Farm

The Board of Supervisors deliberated on the proposed Sloughhouse Solar Farm at Dillard and Meiss Roads at our January 12 public hearing. My colleagues and I took action to certify the Environmental Impact Report which concluded that the project would not result in significant and unavoidable impacts with implementation of the recommended mitigation measures. This action cleared the project to move forward.

It was not something we undertook lightly.

Our rural-urban connections are a delicate balancing act between the disparate needs of protecting our rural communities, encouraging denser development in our urban and suburban areas, and diligently supporting the economic viability of our farms, ranches, orchards and vineyards in Sacramento County – all while remaining mindful of the critical environmental benefits associated with realizing measurable progress on our climate action goals.

These conversations are challenging but agricultural viability is becoming increasingly reliant on ancillary revenue sources; whether through benefits of ag tourism on farm stays, wineries, breweries and other event centers; local farm to market opportunities such as farmers markets, farm stands and produce subscription boxes; or, in cases like this, mitigation prompting conservation easements that help other productive land stay viable.

During the Board of Supervisors hearing, Stan Van Vleck of Van Vleck Ranch commented, “In 2016, the Board of Supervisors approved us working in partnership to try to preserve our operations as one of the longest-lived ag operations in the state, dating back to before Abraham Lincoln started as President. We plan on being here for a lot longer by working to keep our ranch in business in perpetuity.” I assure you the Van Vleck Ranch is not the only ag property in our county that we need to remain viable. There are many, many others.

Sacramento County’s farms and ranches generated $602.7 million in 2022, reflecting 5% growth over the prior year and largely coming from the communities along the southern and eastern boundaries of our county. But family farmers continue to struggle, and future generations of farmers will face even greater challenges to their productivity and viability when factoring in the increasing costs of land, water, equipment, labor and other operational costs, and the risks of extreme weather incidents like heat waves and floods from atmospheric rivers.

Solar energy is a conditionally permissible land use in Ag-20 zoning areas with an appropriate use permit. Ensuring our rural-urban connections are successful for impacted residents surely includes listening to neighbors and community members, incorporating robust landscape buffers for visual benefits and ultimately preserving important farmland.

As we move toward carbon neutrality goals in Sacramento County, greater reliance will be placed on renewable energy sources and electrifying our economy, including moving our household appliances away from natural gas and our vehicles toward renewable energy. I’m supportive of a fiscally prudent approach to the implementation of these measures while ensuring the mutual economic benefit to keeping our farmers and ranchers in business, with the addition of community-friendly solar projects.

5 Over 50 Nominations

Sacramento County is gearing up to celebrate its outstanding volunteers aged 50 and older! The Sacramento County Adult and Aging Commission is now accepting applications to nominate outstanding volunteers who have contributed to the health and vitality of our community through their work.

A volunteer will be selected from each of the five Sacramento County districts and the awards will be presented during a Sacramento County Board of Supervisors meeting in May 2024 to coincide with recognition of Older Americans Month.

All submissions must be received by February 9, 2024.

To nominate a volunteer, please visit: 5 Over 50 Volunteer Award Nomination Form.

Criteria for nominees and more information about the award can be found on the Adult and Aging Commission website. Or, if you have additional questions, please call (916) 874-9336.

TOT Grant

The Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) Grant program is here again! The Board of Supervisors will soon be awarding $1 million to organizations that carry out community-based programs and/or services in the areas of economic and workforce development, arts and culture, community development and health and human services.

Grants will be allocated through a competitive process and applicants must meet eligibility and funding requirements. Applications will be accepted online beginning February 2, 2024, through March 4, 2024. No late applications will be accepted.

Grant Application Deadline: March 4, 2024, 5 p.m.

There will be a Grant Program and Application Virtual Workshop on February 13, 2024, from 10 a.m. - 11:30 a.m.

The workshop includes a review of the following:

- Grant Program and Timeline
- Insurance Requirements
- Application Questions
- Timeline and Submission Information
- Q & A's

Grant applications will then go through a review period before the final determination for TOT grant recipients is made by the Board of Supervisors for their action in June.

More information on the TOT Grant Program can be found here.

Sac Metro Fire CERT Academy

The Sacramento Metropolitan Fire District is looking for volunteers for their Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) program which provides emergency preparedness and disaster response training. The CERT program helps prepare individuals to take care of themselves, their family, and if they choose, their neighbors during a catastrophic event.

The Metro Fire Basic CERT Class is a free class open to those who live or work in Metro Fire's service area. To register, you must be at least 15 years of age (there is no upper age limit). The class is offered twice a year, once in the spring and once in the fall. For young people considering a career as a first responder, this is also a valuable experience.

Visit the Metro Fire website for more information on the CERT program.
